INTRODUCTION

Recordings and related material of Missouri and Ozark folk musicians and folklorists; primarily Max Hunter, Loman Cansler, and R.P. Christeson. The recordings include songs and discussions on many aspects of folk song collecting and folklore.

DONOR INFORMATION

The Adolf E. and Rebecca B. Schroeder Collection was donated to the University of Missouri by the Schroeders on January 12, 1988 (Accession No. 4817). An addition to the collection was made on May 19, 1988 (Accession No. 4845).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Adolf E. Schroeder served as Professor of German at the University of Missouri-Columbia from 1969 to 1985. He collected oral histories and folklore among Euro-American groups in Missouri and, with Rebecca B. Schroeder, was instrumental in re-activating the Missouri Folklore Society in 1977. He served as President and board member of the Society, and in these capacities planned and directed folk festivals and other programs relating to folklore at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Schroeder Collection centers primarily on the work of Missouri’s three major folk music collector-performers: Loman Cansler of Kansas City, a native of Dallas County, Missouri, and a well known Midwestern singer-collector; R.P. Christeson of Auxvasse, an authority on fiddle tunes; and Max Hunter of Springfield, an Ozark singer-collector and festival organizer who worked closely with Mary Celestia Parler and Vance Randolph. Cansler, Christeson, and Hunter were interviewed at their homes and recorded in concert and at workshop/lectures at the University of Missouri-Columbia. This collection complements and supplements the Christeson, Cansler, and Hunter collections in the Western Historical Manuscript Collection.

In addition to interviews and performances by Cansler, Christeson, Hunter and other prominent Missouri musicians such as Art Galbraith and Gordon McCann, the collection includes recordings of folk festivals in Columbia, St. Louis, and Springfield, Missouri; Washington, D.C.; Eureka Springs, Arkansas; and other locations. A variety of performers, speakers and discussants are featured. Also represented in the collection are programs at the University of Missouri-Columbia which brought nationally known folklorists such as Roger Abrahams, Joseph C. Hickerson, Ellen Stekert, Barre Toelken, and Roger Welsch; cultural historians including Charles van Ravenswaay; and local historians and musicians to the campus.

The bulk of the collection consists of audio cassettes that are, for the most part, arranged by contributor and then chronologically thereunder. In addition to performances of ballads, songs, and fiddle tunes, the audio cassettes include reminiscences of collecting experiences, discussion of collecting approaches and techniques, theories of folklore and folk music survival, contextual information on folklife during the first half of the 20th century, and information on singers and other musicians. Although primarily focusing on the Anglo-American music tradition, the collection includes examples of rural black music, French and German music, and some folk revival music current in Columbia in the 1970s.

Rebecca Schroeder, partially funded by a grant from the Skaggs Foundation, abstracted the audio cassettes in this collection in 1988 and 1989. An alphabetical listing of the songs performed and discussed on the audio cassettes follows this inventory.

Records, audio tapes, video cassettes, and transcripts of some of the material in the collection follow the audio cassettes. Notes in the audio cassettes portion of the inventory indicate if there is related material in the later sections of the collection. Included in the transcripts section are copies of lectures on folk music given by Adolf Schroeder and programs from various folk music festivals. Video cassettes of some of the interviews and performances in this collection are located in the Missouri Origins Project, Collection No. 3852. Notes in the audio cassettes portion of the inventory indicate if there is related material in the Missouri Origins Project. (Note: the dates on the audio cassettes in this collection and the dates on the video cassettes in the Missouri Origins Project that relate to those audio cassettes are not always the same. The video cassettes have been checked to see that they are the ones from which the audio cassettes were made.)

Mrs. Spencer introduces daughter Kathy, son Stephen, and husband Ralph. Tunes: "Chicken Reel," the Kentucky version of "Liza Jane," and a "new-fangled version."

a.c. 12, side 2: Spencer family continued: Discussion of instruments; "Golden Slippers"; "Sippin' Cider" (vocal); "I wish I Was Single Again" (vocal); comment about Howard, then "Howard's Tune"; songs: "Love, I've Only Been Down to the Club"; "Pat Malone" or "Finnegan's Wake"; "Sugar in the Gourd"; "Bury Me Beneath the Weeping Willow Tree."
"Four Night's Drunk" ("Our Goodman" Child 274); discussion of cigar box fiddle and homemade mandolin. "Bug on Me" (Heel and Toe); "Turkey in the Straw." Max asks for Minnie Spencer's version of "Young Charlotte" and she sings a verse.

a.c. 13, side 1: Same as a.c. 12, but ends with introduction of Charlie Pashia.

a.c. 14-15 MAX HUNTER at the University of Missouri-Columbia, 6 November 80, for the series, "Folklore: The Universal Language." Recorded from the audience by A.E. Schroeder.

a.c. 14, side 1: Discussion of collection--jokes, proverbial expressions, 1250. Deposit of collection at Springfield-Greene County Library; he wants the material to be used; mention of thesis on "Selected Child Ballads" from his collection; collecting rules he established: 1) Stay in the Ozarks --Ozarks defined by cultural patterns; 2) All materials recorded in "the field"; there are no copies of recordings. Comments about singers and their feelings for the songs: "Rome County"; "The Streets of Laredo" with comment about origin; "A Sailor Cut Down in his Prime"; "Prisoner's Song" with comment about Vernon Dalhart version; "George Collins" (Child 85, "Lady Alice"); about "The Jew's Garden" (Child 155) and a discussion of the story of the ballad; story about "Maid of Dundee" (Singer knew part from childhood, then learned additional parts in California and New York--he erased.)

a.c. 14, side 2: "The Jew's Garden"; comment about lines from "The Brown Girl" (Child 73); "I Used to Dress Well"; Cathy Barton and Dave Para: "Valley Forge" (instrumental) learned from Ramona Jones who learned it from Jimmy Driftwood; the tune was also known and performed by the Morrison twins of Mountain View, Arkansas; "The Rivers of Texas"; "He's Gone, Let Him Go, God Bless Him" (from Aunt Ollie Gilbert); Max Hunter: Remembrance about mother darning socks and singing "Barbara Allen."

a.c. 15, side 1: Begins with 3 minutes of unrecorded tape. Comments about "The Dewy Dens of Yarrow" (Child 214, 215); Mary Celestia Parler almost jumped out the window when he first sang the song to a folklore class at the University of Arkansas. Changes he would make in collecting rules: He would not erase songs but would record person's entire repertory.

a.c. 15, side 2: Blank

a.c. 44, side 1: Introduction to his collection recorded 19 February 1969 by Max Hunter. (Speed should be adjusted to get normal tone.) Includes thoughts on the origin of music, Biblical quotations regarding music, and views on traditional folk song and folk revival. Remembrances of earlier times in America and comparisons with modern times. His contributors had "traditional security" compared with today's "traditional insecurity." Rules he established for his collection!) 1) Collect only in the Ozarks, 2) keep the song as he found it, 3) keep out songs from commercial recordings, 4) refuse to give song to any person who might change it, and 5) keep his collecting fun. Reminiscences of collecting: helping with haying; attendance at "shivaree" where rock fight developed; visit with Vance Randolph to C.W. Ingenthron at Walnut Shade, Missouri; remembrances of Mrs. Coberley in Wheatland, Missouri; collecting with Mary Parler; Pleasant Valley community and Allie Long Parker; Mr. Herbert Philbrick in Crocker, Missouri, where he collected "Dewy Dens of Yarrow." (On later visits Mr. Philbrick could not recall the ballad.) Getting stuck in creek on collecting trip. Explanation of sound problems.

a.c. 164-167 GERMAN LIFE IN MISSOURI: Annual Symposium of the Society for German American Studies April 18-19, 1980 at UMC. Program available in folder 9. Also available on audio tape (a.t. 22-31)

a.c. 164, side 1: Introduction of President James C. Olson. President Olson gives overview of German settlement in Missouri and brief history of University of Missouri. Introduction of Charles van Ravenswaay. Charles van Ravenswaay: Recognition of friends who have helped him in his work. Immigrant story a story of deep human experience. People came to conserve and preserve their old ways. Something almost mystical in the migration. 18th century designs and farms recreated in Missouri. Discusses slides. Townscapes, buildings, and objects-both objects brought and objects created here.

a.c. 164, side 2: Discussion of objects continues. Introduction of Yvonne Lange "Have 19th century Germanic Prints Influenced New Mexico Santos?"

a.c. 165, side 1: Dr. Lange concludes her presentation; Schroeder thanks those who have helped in arranging conference. Introduces Grafin Von Lippe, Horst Ueber Horst, and Walter Kamphaefner. Comments by members of Society for German American Studies; Gerhard Friesen and Don Talzmann.

A.C. 167, side 1: Anna Hesse, con’d.: There is a campaign to save the "little houses." Introduction of Sister Audrey Olson. Germans in St. Louis: there was no homogeneous German enclave: Fifty per cent lived in South St. Louis; Thirty-five per cent in North St. Louis; Fifteen per cent in central part of the city--area of elite St. Louisians. Germans did not settle by provincial origin. Very little connection between North and South St. Louis: a mobile group, but always moved West; Language not a vital factor. Church not a factor; in St. Louis--more divisive; political party not a factor; only societies held German population together. In 1910 over 300 societies not including church related societies. Discusses fund raising activities. Biggest bazaar held in 1915 to help "widows and orphans" in Germany--raised over $96,000. Last great fling of St. Louis Germans--societies declined during Prohibition. Questions and discussion relating to various aspects of German life in St. Louis. Introduction of Steven Benjamin to lead discussion on future directions in German American Studies. Long pause. Then reports and discussion.

A.C. 168 JOEL HARTMAN, "The Amish and the Mennonites." January 5, 1983 at UMC.

Side 1: Family background; Amish and Mennonite as a Separatist Society--not concerned about what others think. Religious origins of Pietist groups: rejected infant Baptism; rejected territorial church; pushed for separation of church and state. Anabaptists persecuted in urban areas, so pietism became a rural movement. Characteristics developed because of persecution: lay ministry; a high level of discipline; non-conformity to the world. Simple life style part of the tradition. Emigrated to North America at different times; therefore cultural differences among groups. Discussion of phases of immigration and different branches of movement. Origins of Amish and Mennonites. Last major wave came in 1941-43. Missouri has the fastest growing population of Amish at present, but Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Indiana have larger populations. Reasons for growth in Missouri--land prices; social and geographic isolation possible; groups more concerned about influences of liberal Amish groups than influence of outsiders; availability of space for expanding agrarian populations; laxity of enforcement of truancy laws.

Side 2: Discussion of schools. First settlement of Amish in Missouri in 1850; first congregation established in 1870. In 1898 community established in Audrain County; group in Butler County treated roughly by neighbors (1921)--most settlements prior to World War II failed. Since that time settlements have been more successful. Enumerates and describes settlements. Discussion of "Oral Culture." Questions and answers. Differences between Eastern and Midwestern Amish. Characteristics of settlement at Clark, the future of Amish and Mennonite groups. Schools; challenge to excommunication ban; cost of agricultural enterprises; high cost of health care a problem.

a.c. 169, side 1: Introductions; Paul and Win Grace "My Name Is Morgan, But it Ain't J.P."; "The Milwaukee Blues"; "Only a Memory Away"; "Fifty Miles of Elbow Room"; "An Irish Love Song"; "I Want To Be a Cowboy's Sweetheart."

a.c. 170, side 1: Cathy Barton and Dave Para; "Sundown"; Fiddle tunes on hammer dulcimer; "Lily of Arkansas"; "Sing and Turn Jubilee." "I Drew My Ship"; Introduction to tunes learned from Dr. Adolf Eichenseer, Regensburg, West Germany.

a.c. 171 ROGER ABRAHAMS with ALMEDA RIDDLE at the Arkansas Folklore Society meeting, 8 April, 1978. The quality of this tape is poor with some sections incomprehensible. However the songs are clear, and the tape as a whole demonstrates the rapport between Abrahams and "Granny" Riddle.

Side 1: "Four Marys" (Mary Hamilton, Child 173); Roger recalls that Almeda heard him sing this ballad at a Folk Festival and recalled several core stanzas, including the one reporting that the child was still born. When she returned home she called relatives and friends and pieced together the song, "recaptured" it; "Lady Margaret" (Child 74); "A Trooper Cut Down in His Prime" (An early version of the song from which "The Streets of Laredo" developed;) Question: About how many songs does she know? "About 400 ballads." "The Blind Child's Prayer." Roger Abrahams "The Brown Girl" (Child 73); Almeda "The Little Black Mustache."

Side 2: "The Little Black Mustache," con'd. "La, La, Tika La-de-O"; "Froggie Went a' Courtin"; "A Poor Wayfaring Stranger"; "O, Come, Come to the Old Church Yard." Roger Abrahams comments on "rumor" that tennis and folklore were two growth industries; dilemma of folklorists in face of widespread public interest in folklore; The America Folklife Festival of 1976--"the largest folklife festival ever held"; discussion of Folklife Division in the Smithsonian, The American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress; and the Folk Arts Program at the National Endowment for the Arts. Question; Does the American Folklife Center have a granting function? No, but a research function--a task force to carry out studies; Chicago ethnic project not successful. Nevada Project jointly carried out by Smithsonian, American Folklife Center, and Folk Arts Program of NEA.
