Frank Carmany Wallower was born on August 23, 1882, at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. He was the son of Elias Zollinger Wallower, a newspaperman and member of a group of Harrisburg investors who were financing mining operations in the mineral district of southwestern Missouri. After education at Columbia University as a mining engineer, F. C. Wallower was invited by the Harrisburg group to supervise their investments in Missouri. He came to Joplin in 1906 to manage the Bradford-Kansas City Mining Company, which operated the Daylight Mine between Joplin and Webb City, and the Keystone Hotel in Joplin. In 1912, after operating numerous mines and mills in Missouri, Wallower moved his operations to the Picher field in Oklahoma.

In 1925 Wallower was elected director and general manager of the Southwest Missouri Railroad Company (q.v.), an interurban line between Carthage, Missouri, and Picher, Oklahoma. He later served as a co-receiver and trustee of the road. Wallower retired from mining in 1932 and organized the Tri-State Casualty Insurance Company in Oklahoma. He managed this firm and a subsidiary until 1946. He then retired and moved to the Mission Hills Farm near Joplin, where he lived until 1964. He died in Joplin in 1966.

The Wallower papers consist primarily of materials connected with his unfinished autobiography, “A Review of Sixty Years,” which he began writing after his retirement. There are three separate versions of the autobiography in this collection, each containing both original pages and carbons. Each version is incomplete and differs slightly from the others. Taken as a whole, they provide a composite of the intended form of the autobiography.

In connection with “A Review of Sixty Years,” Wallower collected newspaper clippings and photographs illustrative of his career in the mines and with the Southwest Missouri Railroad Company. The photographs include both surface and underground views of mines and mills he operated in Missouri and Oklahoma. There are also interior views of the mills and the “House of Mystery,” an electrolytic plant constructed during World War One. Not all of the photographs are identified. They have been assigned arbitrary catalog numbers and are filed in order following the manuscript material and newspaper clippings. Also in the collection, and filed with the photographs, is a motorman’s badge from the Southwest Missouri Railroad Company.

Shelf List

These are papers of a mine owner and operator at Joplin, Missouri, and manager of the Southwest Missouri Railroad Company. The collection includes rough drafts of his unfinished autobiography, “A Review of Sixty Years,” correspondence, newspaper clippings, and photographs of lead and zinc mines in Jasper County, Missouri.

Folder 1: “A Review of Sixty Years.” Index and Chapter One.

Folder 4: Miscellaneous papers, 1906-1966. Correspondence, mining contracts, and printed material.

Folder 5: Newspaper clippings on Frank C. Wallower and his career, ca. 1914-1960.

Folder 6: Newspaper clippings on the Southwest Missouri Railroad Company.

Photographs: This collection contains 216 photographs. See the Information Folder for an itemized list of these views.

Motorman's badge, Southwest Missouri Railroad Company. This badge is in a small plastic box, and is filed in the same box with the photographs.
