Felix Adler (1851-1933) founded the Society for Ethical Culture in New York City in 1876. Born in Germany, Adler came with his parents to America in 1857 when Temple Emanu-El appointed his father, Dr. Samuel Adler, as rabbi. Early experiences with his parents helping the poor in New York's tenements, his marriage in 1880 to Helen Goldmark, who actively participated in community service, and his exposure to Immanuel Kant and socialism at Columbia College helped lead Adler to develop a philosophy of ethics and social reform.

After Adler completed his doctorate in Semitica at Heidelberg in March 1873, Cornell University appointed him to a non-resident lectureship in Hebrew and Oriental Literature. On return weekend trips to New York, Adler's informal meetings with friends developed into the Society for Ethical Culture, formally established with approximately one hundred members on May 15, 1876. The Society began a "Workingman's School" and a kindergarten to teach ethical values and religious fellowship that did not depend on dogma or theological creed.

Adler unsuccessfully attempted to organize a similar group in St. Louis in June 1883. The organization dissolved shortly thereafter due to Adler's philosophical differences with the atheism of its leadership. Adler did organize an Ethical Society in Chicago and appointed William Salter (1853-1931), a former Unitarian minister, as lecturer. Another former Unitarian, S. Burns Weston (1855-1936), helped organize the Society for Ethical Culture in Philadelphia in 1885.

In April 1886, Weston invited Walter L. Sheldon (1858-1907) to give a lecture series on the aims of the Ethical Society to an audience of fifty people in St. Louis. Weston had met Sheldon four years earlier while studying philosophy in Berlin. After the lecture series, supporters of the movement founded the Society for Ethical Culture of St. Louis. Felix Adler provided the new society's opening address. Upon the group's invitation, Walter Sheldon became the lecturer and leader of the St. Louis society in November 1886. He remained in that position until his death in June 1907.
Sheldon was raised in Vermont and received his undergraduate education at Middlebury College and Princeton. He enrolled in October 1881 at the University of Berlin where S. Burns Weston introduced him to the Ethical Movement. Sheldon returned to New York with Weston in 1883 and began work with the Ethical Society as an editor and director of the Young Men's Union. After his appointment to the St. Louis Society, Sheldon lectured at the Pickwick Theatre on Washington Avenue until a permanent residence for the Society was established at the original St. Louis Art Museum's Memorial Hall on 19th and Locust.

The St. Louis society adopted a constitution and bylaws at a meeting chaired by Mr. James Taussig in November 1886. It incorporated under the name "Society for Ethical Culture in St. Louis" on May 14, 1887. The Society formally changed its name to the popularly used "Ethical Society of St. Louis" in August 1896.

In addition to Sunday lecture series and services, the Ethical Society organized clubs and classes to discuss politics and literature from an ethical standpoint. In 1891 it founded the Greek Ethics Club, a women's group directed by Walter Sheldon in the study of Greek and World literature. The Political Science Club was founded in 1892 to arrange speaking engagements by political leaders, scholars and local citizens. In January 1901, the Society founded the "Colored People's Self-Improvement Federation" which organized an annual course of lectures for blacks. Blacks were excluded from the Society's regular programs.

In March 1888 the Society opened free reading rooms for wage earners on the second floor of a dairy located on Franklin Avenue. It also established a kindergarten for children under six years old directed by its Ladies Philanthropic Club under the leadership of Society member Martha Fischel. In December 1888 the Society created the Domestic Economy School to teach homemaking skills to working class women for personal use and self-reliance, not as training for employment.

As the practical philanthropies of the Society grew, it rented a building on 18th and Washington and opened a "Self-Culture Hall," or free community school for working people. The Self-Culture Hall offered lecture programs for working women on Thursday evenings, another lecture series on Friday, a variety of social activities including concerts and excursions, and provided reading rooms for use by men on evenings and Sundays. The Society incorporated a separate Self-Culture Association in June 1893 which bought the rental property three years later.

Walter Sheldon hired E.N. Plank as assistant lecturer and assigned him to direct the work of the hall. Plank was later succeeded by the Ethical Society's Sunday School superintendent W. H. Lighty. Roger Baldwin, who later became president of the American Civil Liberties Union, also served as a director of the Self-Culture Hall. The Association opened a second Self-Culture Hall in South St. Louis in 1895. Several other halls were opened and closed in St. Louis neighborhoods as community interests dictated. The Self-Culture Hall was subsumed by St. Louis' Neighborhood Association on North 21st Street in 1911.

Sheldon led the Self-Culture Association until the fall of 1905, thereafter remaining as an ex-officio board member while continuing his work as lecturer and leader of the Society. In addition to his Sunday lectures, Sheldon published addresses and pamphlets on ethical culture and wrote several books: An Ethical Sunday School (New York: 1900); Lessons in the Study of Habits (Chicago: 1903); A Study of the Divine Comedy of Dante (Philadelphia: 1905); and Summer Greetings From Japan (St. Louis: 1908). After a nine-month illness, Walter Sheldon died in June 1907 of "a complications of diseases caused by overwork" according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Shortly after his death, Sheldon's widow, Anna Sheldon contributed an endowment to the Society for the construction of a permanent office on Washington Boulevard. With matching funds raised from its membership, the Society built and moved into the new facility, named the Sheldon Memorial, in 1912.

Percival Chubb replaced Sheldon as the leader of the Ethical Society in 1911. Born in Devonshire, England in 1860, Chubb received his education in the English Civil Service and served for ten years on the Local Government Board of London. Chubb became a charter member of the Ethical Society of London. He came to America in 1889 and worked actively with Felix Adler and the New York Society.

After his appointment as leader of the St. Louis Society, Chubb revived the Greek Ethics Club, which had lanquished after Sheldon's death. The group shifted its focus to the study of fiction, poetry and essays and was renamed the Contemporary Literature Circle. Chubb also led the society in pacifist resistance to World War I. In June 1916 he organized an anti-war demonstration at the St. Louis City Hall; in January 1917 the Society hosted a rally by the National League to Enforce Peace. After the war began, however, the Society contributed to relief efforts, encouraged the purchase of liberty bonds and otherwise patriotically supported American involvement in the war.

In 1913, Chubb served on the executive committee of the St. Louis Federation for Good Citizenship, a group that distributed information on public office holders and political candidates. In 1915 and 1916, he directed a city flag design competition for the St. Louis Pageant Association. During the Depression, Chubb spoke against disregard of Prohibition and was critical of the press and the educational system. He also chaired the League for Independent Political Action in the 1930s. Chubb's book, On The Religious Frontier: From An Outpost of Ethical Religion, was published in 1931.

Chubb retired in 1933. He was replaced by J. Hutton Hynd who had also been active in the London society. Hynd became permanent leader in February 1933 and remained in that position until 1950. J. F. Hornback became the Society's leader in September 1951. Hornback joined the Chicago Ethical Society in 1941, served as leader-in-training with the New York and Brooklyn Societies from 1942 until 1944, and was appointed leader of the Westchester County Ethical Society in 1947 (see collection S0667).

Under Hornback's leadership, the Society moved from its location at the Sheldon Memorial in 1964 to its current facility on Clayton Road, a site considered a local architectural landmark. The Society continued to use the Sheldon Memorial for chamber music concerts for the next ten years. Subsequent owners have continued to use the building, noted for its acoustics, to present concerts.

In 1983 Hornback submitted his dissertation, The Philosophic Sources and Sanctions of the Founders of the Ethical Society to Columbia University. Hornback retired as director of the
The Ethical Society of St. Louis Records, 1880-1986, documents liberal religion in St. Louis. The records primarily document the development of the St. Louis Society from its founding in 1886 to the present. Addresses by Felix Adler, founder of the national movement, and some early newsletters from the Ethical Societies in Brooklyn, Chicago, Philadelphia and New York have been retained with the collection.

The records are divided into sixteen series: (1) Addresses and Pamphlets by Felix Adler, 1880-1921 (f.1-4); (2) Addresses, Pamphlets and Lectures by Walter Sheldon, 1888-1924 (f.5-70); (3) Addresses, Pamphlets, Lectures and Memorials by Percival Chubb, 1898-1940 (f. 71-81); (4) Addresses and Radio Talks by J. Hutton Hynd, 1948-1953 (f.82-84); (5) By Laws, Constitution and Statements of Purpose, 1892-1955 (f. 85); (6) Annual Reports, 1887-1904 (f. 86-89); (7) Correspondence, 1887-1902 (f. 90-154); (8) Membership Applications and Subscriptions, 1896-1930 (f. 155-196); (9) Membership Lists, 1888-1901, (f. 197-210); (10) Meeting Minutes, 1907-1958 (f.211-266); (11) Financial Ledgers, 1899-1934 (Volumes 1-6); (12) Sheldon Memorial, 1910-1927 (f. 267-286); (13) Histories and Papers, 1954-1983 (f. 287-290); (14) Newsletters, Bulletins and Programs, 1888-1986 (Volumes 1-20, some programs appear in Series 15); (15) Scrapbooks, 1895-1957 (Volumes 1-46); and (16) Photographs 444.1 to 444.44.

The first four series document the ideas and lecture styles of the society's founder and the earliest directors of the St. Louis society. The Felix Adler series dates from six years prior to the founding of the St. Louis society. It reflects Adler's ideas on the Workingman's School and Free Kindergarten, the aims of the ethical culture movement, disarmament, gambling and patriotism. The addresses appear in pamphlets published by the Society and in issues of Ethical Addresses, its monthly lecture supplement.

The Walter Sheldon series, the largest of the four, contains Sheldon's typewritten lecture scripts. Topics include literature, politics, religion, education and psychology. Percival Chubb's addresses concern childhood education, literature and memorials for deceased members of the Society. The collection does not contain a large amount of material from the Society's fourth leader, J. Hutton Hynd. The Hynd series includes eight lectures by Hynd and radio talks prepared in the 1940s for KMOX Radio's "Church of the Air" program broadcast in the 1940s and KWK Radio's "Religion In Life" series in the 40s and 50s. The series also contains addresses and broadcasts by Alexander Langsdorf, R. Walston Chubb and other Ethical Society leaders.

Series 5 and 6 comprise the administrative files of the Society. Series 5 includes published statements on the society's purpose and aims, its constitution and its bylaws. This material primarily dates from 1892-1919; it includes a constitution and bylaws of the American Ethical Union from 1953. Series 6 contains annual reports from 1887 to 1904.

Series 7 includes correspondence from Walter Sheldon to executive committee member Robert Moore, secretary Paul Coste and other members of the Society about financial matters, meeting hall arrangements, and marriage laws, 1888-1906; inquiries about the Society from members and interested parties; member resignations; correspondence from James Taussig, W. E. Fischel, Fred Herzog and other early officers of the society; the 1912 invitation to Percival Chubb to lead the St. Louis society; and correspondence on the opening of the Sheldon Memorial in 1912; correspondence with Chubb, 1911-1930s, including letters documenting the St. Louis Pageant's flag competition, 1915; the League to Enforce Peace, 1917, and Chubbs' support of independent presidential candidate, Robert M. LaFolette in 1924. The series also includes correspondence with Martha Fischel, A. S. Langsdorf and other Ethical Society leaders.

Series 8 and 9 consist of applications for membership in the Ethical Society, subscriber contribution forms from 1896 to 1930 and membership lists from 1888 to 1936 and 1951 to 1952. The membership lists, Series 9, also contain committee and club memberships and files on deceased and former members from 1900 to 1980 selected by James F. Hornback. These files include correspondence, biographical data, newsclippings, photographs, obituaries and memorial service programs.

Series 10 includes meeting minutes of the Society's Drama League, Executive Committee, councils and clubs, the St. Louis Community Forum and Peace Group, the St. Louis School of Social Economy, the United Nations Discussion Group, the Women's Auxiliary, and the Young People's Assembly. The series contains only a small amount of material from the Self-Culture Association, including an annual report, budgets and bulletins. The collection does not include material from the Society's "Colored People's Self-Improvement Federation."

The Ethical Society's financial ledgers from 1899 to 1934 comprise Series 11.

Series 12, contains bids, building plans, contracts and specifications, correspondence, newsclippings, financial records and dedication literature on the construction and opening of the Sheldon Memorial in 1912. It includes some blueprints and floor plans of the building, its windows and its elevators. The series also contains literature on the Society's farewell to its Memorial Hall headquarters on 19th and Locust.

Undated note cards for a proposed paper on the history of the St. Louis society, a paper on the social life of St. Louis written by a former president of the society, and J. F. Hornback's dissertation, Philosopich Sources and Sanctions of the Founders of Ethical Culture, constitute Series 13.

The Newsletters, Bulletins and Programs series, Series 14, includes pamphlets, circulars and bulletins from the Ethical Societies in London, Brooklyn, Chicago, Philadelphia and New York from the late 1800s to the early 1900s. It also includes some non-Ethical Society literature, possibly used in the Self-Culture Hall reading rooms. However, the series primarily contains Sunday Program cards, 1894-1928, 1912-1954, and 1954-1956; issues of the Ethical Record, 1899-1902; monthly bulletins 1914-1932; Anniversary Programs, 1916-1936; the Children's Sunday Assembly Twice A Year newsletter, 1922-1926; Chamber Music Concert Programs, 1930-1980; and the St. Louis Society's weekly bulletin and newsletters, including The Ethical Record, 1899-1902; the News Letter, 1909-1914; Bulletins, 1931-1952; News Notes, 1938-1961; and Ethical Weekly, 1972 and 1985-1986.

Series 15 contains scrapbooks reflecting the activities of the Ethical Society and its leaders.
The series is divided into two sub-series: Scrapbooks, 1895-1958 (vols. 1-38); and Junior Sunday Assembly Scrapbooks, 1923-1946 (vols. 39-46). The first series provides a particularly valuable source for documenting Percival Chubb's relationship to the local press and his direction of the St. Louis Pageant's flag competition in 1915-1916. In addition to newscuttings, the scrapbooks contain meeting notices, programs, convention publicity material from the society's forty-fifth anniversary in 1931 and its fiftieth anniversary in 1936. The second series contains Junior Sunday Assembly registers, programs, calendars and announcements, 1923-1942.

The final series, Photographs 9263-9307, includes photographs from the 1920s to the 1950s of the Ethical Society's original meeting place at the Museum of Fine Arts' Memorial Hall, Sheldon Memorial, a portrait of Walter Sheldon, photos of the society's members and its Boy Scout troop.
