Poet and songwriter Fran Landesman donated her papers to the Western Historical Manuscript Collection at the University of Missouri-St. Louis in the spring of 1999. She retains the copyright to her materials, so that her written permission or the written permission of her heirs is needed in order to reproduce any one of her works in its entirety.

Fran Landesman was born Frances Deitsch on October 21, 1927, in New York City. Her father, a successful dress manufacturer, collected books; and her mother, a journalist, loved the theater and music. Fran has a brother, Sam Deitsch, who lives in San Francisco.

Fran attended private schools, Temple University in Philadelphia, and the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York. She was working for Biancini Silks in New York when she met Jay Landesman, a writer and publisher of Nerotica magazine from St. Louis. They were married in July of 1950, and shortly thereafter they moved to St. Louis.

Jay went to work in his family's antiques business, and he and his brother, Fred, opened a classy cabaret called the Crystal Palace in 1952. In 1958 the Landesmans moved the Crystal Palace to Gaslight Square, an entertainment district developing among the bars and restaurants and antique shops at Boyle and Olive near the Central West End of St. Louis. The Crystal Palace soon became the focal point of Gaslight Square, producing avant garde theater and bringing new talent to St. Louis, such as Barbra Streisand, Lenny Bruce, Woody Allen, the Smothers Brothers, Mike Nichols and Elaine May, Stiller and Meara, and Phyllis Diller and Dick Gregory from St. Louis.

In 1952 Fran Landesman began writing song lyrics while sitting at a bar listening to the jive conversation of musicians. She translated T. S. Eliot's phrase: "April is the cruellest month," into their hip language and came up with: "Spring can really hang you up the most." The resident piano player at the Crystal Palace, Tommy Wolf, set her words to music. Their song became a jazz classic and began a string of Landesman-Wolf collaborations. They wrote the songs for "The Nervous Set," a musical by Jay Landesman which went to Broadway, and "Molly Darling," a musical by Jay Landesman and Martin Quigley which was performed at the St. Louis Muny Opera. Fran also wrote the song lyrics for "A Walk on the Wild Side" by Nelson Algren.

The Landesmans had two sons, Cosmo and Miles Davis. In 1964 the Landesmans moved to London where avant garde theater was more appreciated. Jay opened a talent agency and publishing company and continued to write plays and an autobiography.

Fran wrote lyrics for songs by Alec Wilder, Steve Allen, Tommy Wolf, George Shearing, Richard Rodney Bennett, and Dudley Moore; and she wrote the lyrics for another musical, "Dearest Dracula," produced by her husband at the Dublin Theater Festival.

In the 1970s Fran began writing poetry. Her poetry has been compared to Edna St. Vincent Millay and Dorothy Parker, because of her combinations of sophistication and innocence, and melancholy and wit. Over the years she has published several volumes of her poetry including: More Truth Than Poetry, Invade My Privacy, The Ballad of the Sad Young Men and Other Verses, Rhymes at Midnight, Is It Overcrowded In Heaven?, The Thorny Side of Love, and Scars and Stripes. Around 1967 Fran began reading her poetry in public at the Crypt of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields cathedral in London and at cabarets and art festivals all over Europe. She read her poetry with R. D. Laing, the Scottish psychologist who wrote The Divided Self, and with Michael Horowitz who organized the Olympics of Poetry at Prince Albert Hall. She also reads her poetry on BBC radio.

In addition Fran has translated songs by Edith Piaf and Jaques Brel from French into English, written screenplays and song lyrics for plays, and in recent years she has collaborated with Simon Wallace on a CD of Landesman/Wallace songs sung by Nicki Leighton Thomas.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Fran Landesman Papers are divided into six series.

Series One: Personal Material and Correspondence contains biographical material and reviews and articles about Fran. It contains flyers and programs for shows. It contains correspondence regarding recordings, publishing, theater productions, permission to perform songs, royalties, poetry readings, interviews, and correspondence with friends and family. Many of the letters and cards are undated or are from the 1990s. It contains an essay on writing poetry and a speech in favor of marijuana.

Series Two: Published Songs and Plays contains published copies of sheet music, books and catalogs containing songs with lyrics by Fran Landesman, and annotated scripts for plays on which Fran collaborated or wrote the lyrics.

Series Three: Poetry contains printed and handwritten poems and song lyrics by Fran Landesman, magazines containing poems by Fran, galley proofs for small books of poetry, and the stage books for Invade My Privacy and Confessions of a Middle Ages Juvenile Delinquent from which Fran read on stage.

Series Four: Published Poetry contains copies of the small, published books of poetry by Fran Landesman including More Truth Than Poetry, The Ballad of the Sad Young Men and Other Verse, Invade My Privacy, Is It Overcrowded In Heaven?, The Thorny Side of Love, Rhymes at Midnight, Scars and Stripes, and Songs Without Music.

Series Five: Photographs contains personal photographs and publicity shots from poetry readings. Some photographs of Gaslight Square years are included.

Series Six: Audio Tapes, CDs, and LPs contains demo tapes of music with lyrics by Fran Landesman, demo tapes of performances by Fran, demo tapes by friends of Jay and Fran, tapes of broadcast interviews with Fran, and tapes of live performances by Fran.
