The St. Louis County Cemetery Collection contains research by Ann Morris in preparation for a book published in 2000 titled Sacred Green Space: A Survey of Cemeteries in St. Louis County. The project began in 1996 when Ann Morris started her research. In 1997, she signed a contract with the City of Kirkwood to conduct a survey of extant African-American cemeteries in the Saint Louis area. The ultimate goal was to evaluate Quinette Cemetery for listing on the National Register of Historic Places. The project expanded with the help of the Missouri State Historic Preservation Office to include all cemeteries in St. Louis County. It also was used to determine which cemeteries are eligible for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places. Grants from the Missouri State Historic Preservation Office, the City of Kirkwood, the Cemetery Management Association of Greater St. Louis and the Desco Group funded the book.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The St. Louis County Cemetery Collection consists of documents, books, and photographs collected by Ann Morris in preparation for her book. The first series in the collection includes research on individual cemeteries. These documents include correspondence, newspaper clippings, maps, pamphlets, and records from the Missouri State Historic Preservation Office. The second series contains administrative files and general research for the book. These files also include correspondence, newspaper clippings, maps, and records from the Missouri State Historic Preservation Office. Series three contains the early research design and two copies of the rough draft, one bound and one unbound. It also has four volumes of Old Cemeteries of St. Louis County, MO published by the St. Louis Genealogical Society. The final series is comprised of 94 photographs taken of St. Louis County cemeteries. These photographs include both prints and negatives.
