INTRODUCTION

The papers of Dr. Howard A. Rusk, considered to be the father of rehabilitation medicine, contain Rusk's correspondence and writings, publicity clippings, photographs, speeches, awards, and other materials concerning his groundbreaking work with the injured and disabled.

DONOR INFORMATION

The Howard A. Rusk Papers were donated to the University of Missouri on 27 May 1997 by his son, Howard A. Rusk, Jr. (Accession No. 5718).

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Howard A. Rusk was born in Brookfield, Missouri, on 9 April 1901. He received his A.B. from the University of Missouri in 1923 and earned his medical degree at the University of Pennsylvania in 1925. He returned to Missouri to intern at St. Luke's Hospital in St. Louis and then began his private practice in internal medicine in 1926. That same year he married Gladys Houx of Marshall, Missouri.

Rusk left private practice in 1942 to join the Army Air Corps. While working as Chief of Medical Services at Jefferson Barracks in St. Louis, he noticed that patients were terribly bored and that there was a high rate of recidivism because the men were not physically fit enough to rejoin their units after being released from the hospital. He designed simple activities to challenge them both physically and mentally during their convalescence and soon the re-admittance rate dropped dramatically. His efforts caught the attention of generals David N.W. Grant and Henry (Hap) Arnold and he was summoned to Washington, D.C., to set up a similar program for the entire Army Air Corps. It is estimated Rusk's Convalescent Training Program saved over five million man-hours during the war and gave countless disabled veterans hope and a sense of purpose after the war. He earned the Distinguished Service Medal for his work and eventually retired as a Brigadier General in the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

Buoyed by his success in the Army, Rusk convinced the medical school at New York University to free up some wards in Bellevue and Goldwater Hospitals in which to rehabilitate civilians. At first his efforts were met with skepticism and ridicule by his fellow doctors but he gained the support of several prominent individuals including Bernard M. Baruch, Louis J. Horowitz, and Bernard and Alva Gimbel, and he was able to raise funds and gain publicity for his work. At the same time Arthur Hays Sulzberger, owner of The New York Times, hired Rusk to write a weekly column on health issues for the paper. Rusk continued to write for the Times until 1971.

In a few short years, after tirelessly promoting rehabilitation for civilians, his successes mounted and, with the help of his benefactors, Rusk founded the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, New York University Medical Center, which opened in 1950. The Institute was later renamed the Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine and then, in 1984, NYU honored Rusk by renaming the hospital the Howard A. Rusk Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine.

In addition to his work at the IRM, Rusk was active in many organizations including the Health for Peace movement in the 1950s, which supported U.S. participation in international rehabilitation and health care. He served as chairman of the Office of Defense Mobilization's Health Resource Advisory Committee and the National Advisory Committee on the Selective Service System from 1950 through 1957. He was elected President of the American-Korean Foundation in 1954 and later served as its chairman. Through the AKF Rusk and his wife traveled to Korea on medical missions several times between 1953 and 1967. Rusk also served as president and council member of the International Society for Rehabilitation of the Disabled (formerly known as the International Society for the Welfare of Cripples). He also acted as a consultant to the United Nations and World Health Organization and was appointed to chair the National Council on the Handicapped from 1979 through 1982.

In 1955 Rusk founded the World Rehabilitation Fund to provide technical assistance programs for rehabilitation in underdeveloped countries. In addition to funding prosthetics workshops around the world, the WRF provided grants for foreign doctors to study rehabilitation in the United States. Rusk served as the Fund's president until 1982 when he was appointed chairman of the board.

Rusk received countless awards for his work in rehabilitation including three Albert Lasker Awards, the Pacem in Terris Award, the French Legion of Honor, and gold medals from the International Ben Franklin Society and National Institute for Social Sciences.

He wrote numerous articles on rehabilitation for magazines, journals, and encyclopedias. He also was involved in writing many books including New Hope for the Handicapped in 1949 which he co-wrote with his colleague, Eugene (Jack) Taylor, and Living with a Disability in 1953. He also served as senior author of Rehabilitation Medicine in 1958 and, in 1972, wrote his autobiography, A World to Care For.

Rusk and his wife had three children. Gladys Rusk died on 14 October 1980 and Howard Rusk died on 4 November 1989.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Howard A. Rusk Papers consist of correspondence, photographs, publicity clippings, writings, and audio/visual materials documenting Rusk's work in rehabilitation medicine. The papers are arranged into 13 series:

Correspondence

Photographs

World War II

Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine

Organizations

Appointment Books

Writings

Publicity

Speeches

Travel

Awards

Subject Files

Audio/Visual Materials.

FOLDER LIST

Correspondence Series

The Correspondence series is arranged alphabetically by the sender's name. In cases where the sender represented an organization such as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the correspondence is filed under that name instead of the writer of the letter. The correspondence spans the 1930s to the 1990s.

This series includes correspondence from presidents, bureaucrats, fellow doctors, supporters, and those seeking advice from Rusk. The letters cover topics ranging from public health, international cooperation in health care, the Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine, new ideas for self-help devices for the disabled, and legislation for the disabled. The correspondence documents the rise of rehabilitation as the "third phase of medicine," as Rusk liked to put it, and the efforts of Rusk and others to change attitudes and public policy regarding people with disabilities.

Photographs Series

The Photographs series consists of photographs of Rusk and his colleagues as well as photo essays on individuals and programs at the Institute. Several photographs depict special events at the Institute such as holiday celebrations, groundbreaking ceremonies, and visits by prominent individuals such as Edith Bolling Gault Wilson, Bernard Baruch, and Eleanor Roosevelt. This series also contains photographs of the Army Air Force Convalescent Training Program Rusk began during World War II, autographed portraits of such Air Force officers as Hap Arnold, James Doolittle, and Lauris Norstad, and autographed photographs of presidents Truman, Eisenhower, Johnson, and Ford.

The photographs from Rusk's travels, particularly those from his trip to Korea in 1953, help document international cooperation in providing rehabilitation services to underdeveloped and war torn nations.

These photographs also depict the struggles and triumphs of the disabled persons treated at the Institute and of the evolution of rehabilitation services from the 1940s through 1970s.

The photographs are arranged according to a number scheme developed by Rusk's support staff, a copy of which is included at the end of the finding aid.

World War II Series

The World War II series documents Rusk's early work with rehabilitation in the Army Air Force and is arranged topically. Publications, publicity clippings, and photographs from various convalescent centers make up the bulk of this series, but other items would also be of interest to those studying World War II, such as Rusk's diary from the Potsdam Conference which includes his descriptions of London, Paris, and Germany in 1945, and his impressions of Josef Stalin and others involved in the conference.

Other interesting items in this series include booklets handed out to patients at the convalescent centers explaining the types of programs offered and a book detailing the accomplishments of those individuals who were awarded the Distinguished Service Medal during the war, including Rusk.

Writings Series

The Writings series contains a collection of Rusk's writings throughout his career. The series is divided into three subseries: Books, Articles, and Other Writings and is arranged chronologically within each of those subseries.

Books Subseries

The Books subseries contains book projects Rusk was involved with either as author, co-author, or contributor. In some cases, he only wrote a chapter or the introduction to the book.

Articles Subseries

The Articles subseries contains nearly all the articles Rusk wrote for both scholarly journals and popular magazines and covers a wide variety of topics concerning rehabilitation, including rehabilitation in paralyzed, cardiovascular, stroke, and cancer patients, employment for people with disabilities, and psychological aspects of having a disability.

Rusk's staff numbered each article and they are generally arranged chronologically. A bibliography of all the articles, with their corresponding number is included at the beginning of this series. A few of the articles are missing.

This series also includes the articles Rusk wrote for the Medical World News and New York Times. The articles from the Times were to have been microfilmed with other fragile items from the collection, so the folder numbers in this series do not run sequentially.

Publicity Series

The Publicity series contains magazine and newspaper clippings and other promotional materials concerning Rusk and his work as well as publicity from his various media appearances. Rusk actively sought publicity for rehabilitation medicine, public health, international health, and improvements in public accommodations, better health services, and employment for the disabled and aged. In addition, he often spoke out against mandatory retirement ages and inactivity in the elderly.

Some of the clippings are in scrapbooks that are arranged both chronologically and by topic. The series is arranged chronologically where possible.

Speeches Series

The Speeches series contains announcements, publicity, correspondence, and photographs documenting to many of the speeches Rusk gave during his career. Rusk usually spoke extemporaneously so there are only a handful of his speeches in this series. However, the testimony he gave before Congress on several occasions about rehabilitation and public health legislation is included here.

Travel Series

The Travel series consists of correspondence, publicity clippings, and photographs relating to Rusk's medical missions and fact-finding tours. Of special interest are the photograph scrapbooks of a children's rehabilitation institute and recreation camp in Poland given to Rusk during his trip there in 1951, as well as photographs from his trips to Korea in 1953 and 1956.

This series is arranged alphabetically by country name.

Audio/Visual Material Series

The Audio/Visual Material series consists of audio and video tapes and cassettes. The audio tapes mostly comprise radio programs. Several tapes concern the problems of returning veterans and most likely date to the mid-1940s.

The bulk of the audio cassettes contain Rusk's reminiscences about his career. Others include his eulogies at the funerals of colleague Donald Covalt and longtime supporter, Alva Gimbel.

The video tape and cassettes contain vignettes of Rusk and the Institute as well as news accounts of the renaming of the Institute in his honor.

These materials are arranged chronologically within each media type.
