Historical Note:

Carl (1868-1946) and Robert (1887-1962) Boller were the architects of the architectural firm Carl Boller and Brother, later renamed Boller Brothers. The firm specialized in designing theatres during the first half of the twentieth century. The brothers were born to German immigrants Charles William and Pauline W. A. Grutzmacher Boller in St. Joseph, Missouri. Little is known regarding their early years. It is unclear if either brother had any architectural training.

In 1905, Carl Boller opened an architectural office in Kansas City, Missouri. His brother, Robert, began working as a draftsman for the office that same year and the firm became known as Carl Boller and Brother. Together, the brothers secured several commissions for theatres throughout the Midwest, primarily in the states of Missouri and Kansas, between 1905 and 1917. The firm was not affected by America's entry into World War I, even though Robert Boller would be drafted into the United States Corps of Engineers, leaving Carl to keep the firm running until his brother's return. By 1919, the Boller brothers had designed approximately sixty-five theaters across the Midwest. In 1920, the firm's name was changed to the Boller Brothers.

Carl and Robert Boller believed that decoration should be elegant and refined. They strived to design their theatres with both affordable luxury and comfort, often times favoring Spanish and Italian themes in their theatre creation. The brother's attention to detail, willingness to provide the most ornamentation at affordable prices, and their work ethic helped to establish them as the premier architectural firm for theatre design in the United States. The firm continued to grow and expand through the 1920s, and by the end of the decade the Boller Brothers had designed or remodeled approximately eighty-eight theatres in the Midwest.

The firm fell on hard times after the stock market crash of 1929. With mounting expenses and no new construction projects, the firm dissolved in 1931 having designed or remodeled nearly 300 theatres.

Carl Boller died in California on October 31, 1946, and his brother, Robert, died in Dallas, Texas, on November 24, 1962.

Additional correspondence includes a letter written by Robert Boller to his sister, Marie Clark, dated December 6, 1918. Other materials include photographs of the Boller family home located in St. Joseph, Missouri, Robert Boller's military promotion certificates, and his architect certificate issued by the state of Missouri.

Of particular interest is a short story entitled, "Turning the Blues into Bluebirds," written by Mrs. Robert C. Boller in 1932. The short story tells of the personal experiences of the family during the prosperous 1920s and the family's financial misfortunes during the Great Depression. Mrs. Boller had submitted the short story to the Ladies Home Journal.

Business Papers

This series consists of correspondence between Carl and Robert Boller to their clients, building material providers, and their inquiry into progress updates on construction projects. Also included are publications and advertisements for and about the architectural firm. Additional materials include miscellaneous sketches and notes, a colored rendering of the Cooper Theatre located in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and two unused postcards depicting theatres presumably built by the Boller Brothers.

Oversize

Also included is a colored photograph of the Zone at Camp Funston, Kansas. In addition, there are two photographs, the first is titled, "Architectural Group, Missouri, River Division, U.S. Engineers, Fort Peck Construction Camp," dated 1934. The second is titled, "The Builder's Association 58th Anniversary Annual Banquet, Kansas City, Missouri," dated April 3, 1945. Lastly there are two panoramic photographs both of which are titled, "Company A, Fourth Training Regiment of Engineers, Camp A. A. Humphries, Virginia," dated September 1918.

Architectural Drawings

The architectural drawings constitute the bulk of the collection. There are sixty-five sets of architectural drawings dating between 1912 and 1953. These architectural drawings are predominately of theatres that were designed in the Midwest. Additional buildings include an education building for the Memorial Christian Church of Kansas City, Missouri, St. Marks Church with an unknown location, a garage for G. W. Williams, and a residence for Chas. Blaine. Other architects include the architectural firm of Besecke and DeFoe and the architect George M. Williamson.

These drawings have been arranged by their assigned aperture card number and are available to view on microfilm except for number 150.018. Note that drawings located in box 008x3 have no
